Celebrating America's National Parks

Focus On Seafaring Americans at San Francisco Maritime

CLOCKWISE: These are the faces of America's seafaring legacy - whether the individuals were sailing on the Pacific; producing rope in a local cordage factory; harvesting shrimp on San Francisco Bay; making a home at sea for their children; urging members of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific to organize; paddling home to a village near the Golden Gate; or were young lads learning the ropes from old salty dogs. Experience YOUR America!

The National Park Service protects special places and resources, and preserves them for our children, and future generations. Here at San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park, we celebrate and commemorate the "history and achievements of seafaring Americans and of the Nation's maritime heritage."

From the days when Native American watercraft plied the bay waters, to the days when Europeans explored the coast, to the rush through the Gate after gold, to the development of the Coast as America's gateway to the Pacific: the maritime trades have fed, housed, clothed and inspired generations.

Some Americans sailed west to escape oppression in the Atlantic states. Other Americans brought traditional skills to a new country, and became boatbuilders and fishermen. Others used the sea (and rivers, and sloughs) as a highway for commerce and industry - founding corporations and building cities where the confluence of land and water encouraged trade to flourish.

San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park tells the stories of how those Americans built a country, created industries, raised families and pursued their dreams - from the wooden decks of ships, or along the banks of West Coast waterways.

In the coming months, watch for Park events and activities connected with an upcoming PBS documentary titled "The National Parks, America's Best Idea," produced by Ken Burns. We are proud to be part of the NPS family, honored to serve America's family as stewards of its maritime legacy, and committed to inspiring our children to love and care for some of the most special places on earth - National Parks.

SPECIAL EVENT: "This is America" (the 45-minute series companion film) chronicling the diversity of national park pioneers will be screened at Fort Baker's Mission Blue Chapel, Sausalito, Sept.18, 6PM. Free. RSVP and info: 415-561-3030 x2241.

"The National Parks, America's Best Idea"

A six-part, twelve hour series, produced by Ken Burns, will be aired September 27 - October 2 on PBS (Public Broadcasting Service). For more information on times, please check your local TV listings and PBS station website.

1 Celebrating America's National Parks

At San Francisco Maritime we tell the stories of how seafaring Americans pursued their dreams aboard ships and along the banks of West Coast waterways.

2 Maritime Experiences Told First Hand

Explore the park archives of letters, journals and logbooks. These personal accounts help us imagine and understand the past.

4 Ranger Hats and Arrowhead Patches

Why do park rangers wear that cool hat and what is on the hatband? Why is the arrowhead the symbol of the National Park Service?

Welcome

Fall heralds the return of our 21st annual Sea Music Concert Series, which preserves the rhythms of America's vibrant (and sometimes bawdy!) maritime heritage. And this year, Labor Day visitors will enjoy a concert of traditional working songs on Hyde Street Pier.

New Park offerings this season include "Italian Fishermen's Families," "Climate Change and California Water," and a slate of history programs in our Maritime Library, including a lecture on the wooden freighters of World War One.

You'll discover a new way to see history -- through the eyes of the people who lived it -- in this issue's Collections Corner, which surveys some of the firsthand maritime accounts preserved in the Park's archives. And make sure your youngsters have a pencil handy to puzzle through the fun childrens' activities on the back page!

During your visit this fall, be sure to look for signs identifying American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) projects in-progress throughout the park. In these tough economic times, this ARRA-funded work (part of a $750 million investment in the national park system) both improves our nation's treasures, and creates lasting value for the American people.

Maritime Experiences Told First Hand

When people write down their stories, it captures the past. The museum and archive collections of the park contain many personal accounts in the form of journals, logbooks, and letters. When we read these personal accounts, we can imagine what life was like traveling on the world’s oceans from the days of the Gold Rush to the recent past.

The archivists at San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park preserve, protect, and ensure we have access to these valuable first-hand experiences. Museum Curator Lisbit Bailey has selected three of her favorites.

The Log of the Ship Apollo, 1849. This rough log was neatly written in pencil by Joseph Perkins Beach, the son of the owner of the Apollo. He kept a daily record from January 16, 1849 to November 12, 1849 during his Gold Rush voyage from New York to San Francisco.

Sketches in the log include fish seen and caught, including sharks and a “double headed sun fish.” The entry for August 1, 1849 reads: “Commenced with light winds and pleasant weather. Through the night, rainy & light breezes. Latter part light airs and pleasant weather. It is equal to a play to see the vain endeavors our passengers make to sleep on deck. Tormented by ten thousand fleas. They are still further annoyed by the wakefuls who fasten strings to their feet . . .”

A Journal of Events Made on a Voyage in the Four-masted Bark Drummuir, 1911. Henry A. Butters, an Englishman, arrived in 1906 to attend the University of California at Berkeley. Before commencing his studies, Butters became ill with pneumonia. Typical of the times, his doctor advised him to go to sea to improve his health. He boarded the Drummuir in Port Townsend, WA for his first sea voyage.

Butters assembled the journal after his voyage, and included his sketches, photographs, and letters he had sent to his parents during the voyage. He describes the food: “. . . I am getting used to the fare, which helps out immensely. The coffee, which at first disgusted me, I now imbibe with much gusto; the canned fish, whose odor formerly repelled me, I look forward to as a rare delicacy and I can even go [at] the canned meat like a porterhouse steak.”

A Personal Letter from a Survivor of the Hospital Ship Benevolence Disaster, 1950. In 1946, the Benevolence provided medical support at the atomic bomb tests at Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands. In 1950, conflict in Korea caused many reserve ships, like the Benevolence, to be restored to active service. Prior to deployment, she was on a trial run in dense fog off San Francisco. About four miles off the Golden Gate, the merchant ship Mary Luckenbach hit the Benevolence, and she sank in 15 minutes. Hundreds were saved, but some civilian and naval personnel were lost.

Among the survivors was Irvin T. McGuire. He wrote a letter to his wife recounting his experience. “I saw a high swell coming so I started swimming at an angle from the bow as I thought she was about to nose dive to her grave & did not want to get caught in the suction. I swam hard for a little while & cleared her then I looked back & could see her under the water & the top of the turned over lifeboat. I was alone in the fog.”

These and other suspenseful, and delightful, stories of our maritime past are here for your discovery. To learn more, please make an appointment to visit the Maritime Library by calling (415-561-7030). If you would like to view any of these accounts, ask for the Apollo log (HDC 29 SAFR 13575), the Butter’s journal (HDC 108 SAFR 14315) and the Benevolence letter (HDC 1099 SAFR 14649). # Sea Music Concert Series Returns to Balclutha

This fall we once again invite you to experience the driving rhythms of chanteys and the beauty of seafaring ballads from the wooden decks of the 1886 square-rigged sailing ship Balclutha, berthed at Hyde Street Pier on San Francisco’s Fisherman’s Wharf.

San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park proudly presents its 21st Annual Sea Music Concert Series. With the city lights twinkling in the background, the Balclutha is a unique setting to hear some of the finest performers of seafaring songs. Before the concert and during intermission, the park invites you to tour the ship and explore the lantern-lit “Cargo Is King” exhibit on the ‘tweendeck. To order tickets, call 415-561-6662 ext. 33 or visit www.nps.gov/safr/planyourvisit/seamusicconcertseries2009.htm 😊

Saturdays, September 12, and November 14, 11AM-4PM. Aboard the historic vessels at Hyde Street Pier. Vessel admission.
Step into the past as you board our historic ships. Meet the sailors and help them with their work aboard Balclutha in the morning and return for musical fun during the afternoon “dogwatch.” Visit Balclutha’s cook in the galley, and learn about life in 1901 from ferryboat passengers on Eureka. Talk to the Eureka’s engineer about the walking beam engine, then join Mrs. Galan on the Ark houseboat for afternoon tea to discuss the issues of the day. ☺

IN THE LIBRARY

Beginning September 19, 2009, the library is open to the public on the third Saturday of the month, 10AM to 5PM. Call 415-561-7030.

Programs are held in the Maritime Library, Building E, Fort Mason Center. Fee: $5 ($4 Library friends and SFMNPA) For reservations call 415-561-7040 or melani\_van\_petten@partner.nps.gov.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT: SAILBOAT FERRYMAN TO WALL STREET MILLIONAIRE
Saturday, September 12, 6PM.
T.J. Stiles, author of The First Tycoon: The Epic Life of Cornelius Vanderbilt, will recount the rise of “Commodore” Vanderbilt, one of the wealthiest individuals in American history, from ferryboatman to master of transoceanic steamship lines, whose opening of the Panama route lowered fares and reduced transit times to and from California’s gold fields and helped bring California into the world of American big business.

VIDEO ADVENTURES ON THE HIGH SEAS
Saturday, October 24, 6PM.
Join San Francisco Maritime Ranger Debbie Grace for a look at the J. Porter Shaw Library’s collection of maritime videos, both classic and modern—many a salty tale of the sea available for on-site viewing—with a special focus on the numerous remakes of the pirate tale Treasure Island.

A FLEET TO BE FORGOTTEN: WOODEN FREIGHTERS OF WORLD WAR I
Saturday, November 21, 6PM.
Maritime historian Louis Hough will discuss his new book on the little-known wooden freighters of World War I. They were the Liberty Ships of their day, meant to be built quickly to fill the need for vital goods to be transported to Europe, but in the end were massively overproduced, and forgotten by a government embarrassed by its “terrible waste of timber, toil and treasure.” The book will be available for purchase and signing by the author.

Friends of the San Francisco Maritime Museum Library
Join the Friends and help support the J. Porter Shaw Library at San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park. The Friends welcome members who are interested in maritime books, photos, oral histories and maritime lore. Membership includes reduced admission to Friends’ events, free admission to the Pier, and discounts on book, photo, and vessel plan purchases at the library and The Maritime Store on Hyde Street Pier. Call 415-561-7040.

Activity Page for Kids
Of Ranger Hats and Arrowhead Patches

So how do you know if you are in one of “America’s Best Ideas”?

Did you know you are in a national park? There are 391 units spread all over country. They are all very different, so how can you tell if something is part of the National Park System? Two things to look for are ranger hats and the arrowhead image. They tell us we are in a national park and about the history of the service.

Have you seen a park ranger hat? See the photo far right. There are lots of names for the ranger hat:

Smokey the Bear hat, flat hat and campaign hat. Which name do you like? Do you know why rangers wear a special hat? To find out we need to go back to the year 1916, the year the NPS was created. Before that different groups had protected the national parks including the US. Army. Those men wore hats called campaign hats. When the Park Service was created, park rangers adopted the army hat. Ask a ranger to show you their hat.

The hatband: ask a ranger for a closer look!

Look closely, because there are things on the ranger hat that tells us what parks protect. Around the hat is a strip of brown leather called a hatband with designs on it – plant leaves and Giant Sequoia cones. It also has metal Giant Sequoia cones. Why so much Giant Sequoia stuff? Some of earliest national parks were created to protect the famous Giant Sequoia trees in California.

Also look for the arrowhead emblem on signs, pamphlets and park ranger uniforms. It tells us what the NPS protects and preserves. What do you see on the the arrowhead? The buffalo? That represents the wild-life. The tree? The Giant Sequoia again. The mountains and water remind us of the scenic and recreational values of the NPS. The final piece is the patch shape itself. The arrowhead shape represents the historical and archeological resources of the National Parks.

So the patch represents all the pieces of the National Park System!

Sometimes it is hard to know if you are in a national park, but if you see a ranger hat and the arrowhead emblem, you’ve found one!

ACTIVITY: Try creating a patch that tells the story of San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park, just like the arrowhead tells the story of the National Park Service.

What would you put in the patch? Or maybe you want to create a new patch for the National Park Service?

Use the space below to create your patch.
